Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 06 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Remaining cold and showery.

Today:
A cold start with sunny spells and scattered showers developing over the region through morning. Showers locally heavy and blustery into afternoon with sunny spells between. Feeling cold. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
During the evening further showers push south into the region with clear spells developing between. Overnight clear spells become widespread but with a notable breeze. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Friday:
A cold start for some with sunny spells and scattered showers developing through morning. Showers gradually clearing east through afternoon leaving plenty of sunny spells. Winds becoming light. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cloudy and windy with spells of rain, heavy at times during Saturday. Limited brightness on Sunday with outbreaks of rain, but warmer. Sunny spells and scattered heavy showers on Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.